Advance At Warsaw

By International News Service
Allied headquarters announced today that the German seventh army in northern France had been crushed by Allied blows while rampant armored spearheads of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's third army slashed 58 miles southeast of Paris to a point only 165 miles from the borders of the Reich.

With Gen. Patton's armor ripping Nazi defenses to shreds, a headquarters spokesman declared that the Nazi Seventh army had "collapsed" as a fighting unit and that only those elements still capable of organized resistance were offering sporadic opposition to Allied arms.

Field reconnaissance showed that the retreat of Nazi forces to the Seine had developed into a rout. This military catastrophe includes elements of the German 15th Army which attempted to come to the aid of the shattered Seventh.

Remaining Nazi forces west of the Seine are now menaced by a gigantic encircling move in which four Allied drives are taking part. Fleeing Germans trying to cross the Seine are trying to stage an inland Dunkirk by using every means to hand to cross the river. In southern France the American Seventh Army was revealed to have made an amazing 80-mile stab into the heart of France to seize Grenoble, capital of the Isere department, 140 miles from the sea.

Near Mediterranean
Allied forces yesterday were reported 60 miles from the Mediterranean. The capture of Grenoble, in which American armor was well supported by French Maquis forces, swept the Yanks a full 80 miles deeper into France.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23—A new motive for suicide came to light today. Mrs. Lena Zanetto told a coroner's jury that her husband, John, who killed himself with a knife in his grocery store, was despondent because he could not obtain meat to supply his customers.

Baby Survives

WHILE Chicago prosecutors debated over the possible charges to place against Mrs. Betty Dymbcz, 19, Chicago, Baby Dennis Dymbcz, aged 6 weeks, was starting life with a fractured skull, broken leg, collar bone and left arm—but improving. Chicago's State Attorney Edmund Grant claimed the mother had signed a long statement in which the mother allegedly said she beat the baby because it had arrived too soon after her first child.

HUNS INCREASE ROBOT ASSAULT

Air Alive • With Flying Bombs, South England Observer Says

LONDON, Aug. 23—Two unusually sustained flying bomb attacks were launched by the Germans against the southern counties of England, including the London area, shortly after dawn today.

The attacks lasted an hour each, with robot bombs crossing the channel in a stream and adding to the steadily mounting toll of casualties and property damage.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire in one coastal area succeeded in destroying a number of the bombs, but many others crashed down on non-military targets.

The London Daily Mail said today that American experts are aiding Britain's anti-aircraft chief, Gen. Sir Frederick Pile, in the battle against the robots.

A south coast observer said today that "judging from the number and rapidity of flying bombs sent over during the night and morning, the enemy is anxious to get rid of them while the getting is good."

He declared that anti-aircraft fire in his region was non-stop, so thunderous that it almost drowned out the explosion of the robots. "The missiles came so fast and furious," the observer said, "they gave our gunners no respite. The air was alive with them. The sky seemed afire from thousands of bursting shells and exploding bombs."

GEORGE BILL FACING FIRST TEST IN HOUSE

Conservative Revision Anticipated, Rather Than Liberalization

BENEFIT TO BE LIMITED

Federal Workers Making More Than $250 Monthly May Be Eliminated

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—The first test of strength in the house over liberalization of the senate-approved George bill on postwar demobilization was slated to be made in the ways and means committee today.

Rep. John D. Dingell (D) Mich., disclosed he will move to increase unemployment compensation to jobless war workers to bring it in accord with the "G. I. bill of rights" and the recommendation of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

The house, having passed the Colmer surplus property disposal bill and forwarded it to the senate for concurrence, recessed until tomorrow pending the reporting out of the George bill by the ways and means committee.

Revisions Planned

Indications were that the George bill, when revised by the committee, would be more conservative in nature than the original, instead of liberalized. The Senate bill does not increase jobless benefits. The committee has already tentatively voted to eliminate senate provisions for retaining and reemploying jobless war workers and returning servicemen, bar public works planning and prevent the use of government funds for returning jobless war workers to their homes or new employment.

The committee was also discussing eliminating approximately one and a half million or more federal workers from the George provision entitling all government employees to state jobless insurance benefits.

May Limit Benefits

There was some talk among committee members of extending state benefits solely to federal workers in shipyards, arsenals and government war plants receiving $250 a month. Some members objected to providing unemployment compensation for federal war workers who make $100 to $150 a week.

Dingell said he had been unable so far to obtain coverage in the bill for seamen, 70 percent of whom are employed on government-controlled ships. He said parliamentary restrictions also barred giving coverage to employees with one or more workers in place of the present minimum of eight.

Both would require the imposition of new payroll taxes and Dingell said house parliamentarians advised him this would be unconstitutional because the bill originated in the senate.

Substantial agreement has been reached on other provisions of the George bill establishing an overall office of mobilization and reconversion to handle the transition from war to peace.

CHURCHILL, FDR TO MEET SOON, WRITER SAYS

LONDON, Aug. 23—Don Iddon, London Daily Mail correspondent recently returned from New York, declared today that President Roosevelt probably is repacking his traveling bags now for a conference on French soil with Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain.

Iddon said Mr. Roosevelt probably would have gone to England some time ago if British officials and American secret service agents had not dissuaded him because of the robot bomb menace.

Instead, the Mail correspondent said, the President postponed his trip to Europe and went to Hawaii. The Roosevelt-Churchill meeting in France, Iddon predicted, will take place "within a matter of weeks."

DEATH VALLEY HELL FOR HUNS

Writer Says Carnage Is Worst Yet Seen In World War II

By RICHARD TREGASKIS
AT CHOIS, IN THE ARGENTAN-FALAISE POCKET, Aug. 22 — (DELAIED) — This is Death Valley, named by the American boys who completed the bottling up of the remnants of Hitler's once-proud Seventh Army and who now are compressing that bottle and its contents.

I have seen carnage before in this war, at Guadalcanal and elsewhere. But this is the worst of all. Even the French, who have strong stomachs and are less accustomed to sanitation than Americans, hold their noses and gasp when they walk through certain parts of Death Valley.

Everywhere—and I mean everywhere—there are bloated carcasses of men, horses and cattle. Burned out tanks and trucks stand like tortured tombstones for unburi

Ragged, shell-shocked, mumbled German soldiers wander through Death Valley, giving up—if there's enough reasoning left in them to know that surrender means surcease from their hell.

TAUNTS DRIVE FOUR EFFER TO UNIFORM, JAIL

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Aug. 23—Alfred Benjamin Gurney, 18, of Wayne, Mich., was in jail today because he could not stand the taunts of friends who knew he was 4-F in the draft.

To alter his position in the public regard, he is alleged to have donned an Army uniform with insignia, then to have regaled resident residents at Simonton Lake, near Elkhart, Ind., with stories of winning the purple heart and gunnery medals as an artillery corporal in North Africa, Italy and the South Pacific.

He was arrested by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents at the resort and was bound over to the grand jury in South Bend on a charge of illegally wearing the Army uniform.

TURN MAGINOT GUNS

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—A London Times report quoted by the British radio said today that the Germans have turned the guns in the Maginot line in France around to face the Allied forces rushing toward the German frontier.

BRICKER CALLS LEGISLATORS TO AID EDUCATORS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 23—Governor Bricker today called the Ohio legislature to meet in a special session Tuesday night, September 5, to pass emergency legislation to provide pay increases for the state's 38,000 school teachers for the rest of the current year.

Bricker said that the legislature probably would make available an additional five or six million dollars in state funds to add to the approximately two and one-half million dollars which the education department now has but cannot expend because of limitations in the school foundation formula.

"I believe we can get through with the session easily in a couple of days," Bricker said.

If a total of $8,000,000 were provided, it would figure approximately $200 per teacher. However, Bricker said that the individual raises for the balance of the current year would not reach that amount.

PRESIDENT USES UNION CASH TO BUY OFF KILLER

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—James J. Bambrick, former president of local 32B of the Building Service Employees International Union, AFL, was on record today as testifying he spent $10,000 of the union funds to buy off a Chicago killer who was about to rub him out because the underworld regarded him as "a so-and-so nuisance."

Bambrick, who with incumbent local president David Sullivan is defendant in a suit for an accounting of a total of $300,000 of the union's funds, said another $32,000 was spent to defend Bambrick and George Scalise, former international president, after they had been indicted for theft from the union treasury. Scalise was sentenced to five to 10 years in 1940 and Bambrick received a one to two-year sentence in 1941.

Bambrick, now employed as a proofreader, said Scalise was the intermediary in the deal with the Chicago trigger man. Examination in the current suit will continue Friday.

STARLET DISFIGURED

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23—Ann Gillis, 17-year-old starlet, may be permanently scarred about the face as the result of an automobile accident, it was reported today. The actress, who recently appeared in the Abbott and Costello film, "In Society," was driving with David Holt, one-time child star, when the accident happened in Benedict canyon.

YANKEE ARMOR COMES INTO OWN

Mechanized Forces Of America Driving At Top Speed In France

By Major Paul C. Raborg
NEW YORK, Aug. 23—Crashing Allied blows in France become more and more amazing. Truly, Allied armor is on the loose and driving at top speed in all directions.

In Northern France an Allied spearhead is reported as close to Le Havre. General Patton's tanks have crossed the Seine and established a bridgehead. His armored divisions are said to have practically encircled Paris.

In Western France, French and American troops are assaulting Bordeaux. And to the south, on the shores of the sunny Mediterranean, Toulon is encircled and Marseilles is all but cut off.

United States armor has come into its own. Few people realize that ten years after World War One, during the Summer of 1928, a small experimental motorized and mechanized force of all branches of the service was assembled at Fort Leonard Wood, Maryland. That organization was supplied and equipped with tanks and motorized transportation.

From that date on, the armed forces of the United States led in the world in their knowledge of motorization and mechanization. True, because of lack of funds, it was done on a very small scale. Nevertheless, the research work was accomplished.

Immediate Harbor Quiz To Be Asked

Kimmel's Statement Facts Would Amaze Nation Prompts Action

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—Sen. Homer Ferguson (R) Mich., disclosed today he will seek an immediate senatorial investigation of the Pearl Harbor tragedy.

Ferguson's decision to urge an inquiry, despite the fact that congress enacted a law postponing court-martial proceedings of Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, the two former Pearl Harbor commanders, grows out of Kimmel's declaration that the nation would be amazed by the true story.

"Since they bring out the information that he (Kimmel) is to blame, I think the matter should have the fullest investigation so that the public will have all the facts and judge who is to blame," said Ferguson.

"The white light should be turned on this and the facts should be ascertained. And if things happened at Pearl Harbor that would cause us to have a united Army and Navy after the war, I think it would be well for the war effort to see if it would not be wholesome to have that united leadership during the war when we need it."

In refuting statements made by Sen. Harry S. Truman (D) Mo., former chairman of the senate war investigating committee and now the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, Admiral Kimmel contended he has been denied an opportunity to tell his story. Thus, it is assumed he would testify before a congressional body.

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D) Wyo., member of both the judiciary and military committees, branded as "politics" the repeated demands for a court-martial of Kimmel and Short while Sen. Owen Brewster (R) Maine, backed the demand for full information on the Pearl Harbor incident without delay.

"I do not think it would be proper to open up this matter because Admiral Kimmel cannot be tried except by a naval board and his trial at this time while Admiral Nimitz is doing his best to drive (Continued on Page Two)

DE GAULLE SOON MAY BE GIVEN FRENCH CONTROL

LONDON, Aug. 23 — Reuters reported today that the United States and Great Britain are about to hand over the civil administration of France to Gen. Charles De Gaulle's provisional French government.

French forces of the interior were said to be cooperating effectively with representatives of the provisional government, formerly the French Committee of National Liberation.

In Rennes, Brittany, a free press was restored shortly after the Allies liberated the town, according to Reuters.

FDR Lists Lend-Lease Cost At $28,270,000,000, Asks for Continuance

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—President Roosevelt, reporting that lend-lease aid now totals twenty-eight billion 270 million dollars, recommended to congress today that the program be continued "until the unconditional surrender of both Japan and Germany."

The chief executive submitted his sixteenth report to congress on the operations of the lend-lease program to June 30, 1944, which showed expenditures greater than the entire cost of world war one, and almost a third larger than the national debt when he took office on March 4, 1933.

In the three months ended June 30, lend-lease amounted to four billion forty-five million dollars in value, he reported.

Urging continuance of the program, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "we should not permit any weakening of this system of combined war supply to delay final victory a single day or to cost unnecessarily the life of one American boy."

Would Continue

"Until the unconditional surrender of both Japan and Germany, we should continue the lend-lease program on whatever scale is necessary to make the combined striking power of all the United Nations against our enemies (Continued on Page Two)

PARISIANS WIN CAPITAL AFTER FOUR DAY FIGHT

BLOW STRUCK BY 50,000

Armed Interior Forces, Backed By Civilians, Score Great Victory

LONDON, Aug. 23 — French forces of the interior have liberated Paris from the Germans, a little more than four years after the Nazis marched into the cradle of French freedom unopposed.

Headquarters of the FFI broadcast a communique by Gen. Pierre Joseph Koenig, commander of the victorious French forces, which said:

"On Saturday morning, August 19, the national resistance council and the Paris Committee of Liberation in agreement with the national delegates representing the provisional government of the French republic decreed a general uprising in Paris and the Paris area."

"The French forces in the interior, 50,000 strong, armed and supported by several hundred patriots, not armed, went into action. The Paris police, who had previously gone on strike, took over the prefecture of police, and the 'city' island of Paris (the administrative part of the town) was turned into a bastion before which the German attacks broke down."

Germans Beaten

"Yesterday, August 22, after four days of fighting, the enemy was beaten everywhere. The patriots have occupied all public buildings. The representatives of Vichy have been arrested or have taken to flight. Thus the people of Paris have taken a decisive part in the liberation of Paris."

The British broadcasting corporation, which carried the announcement of the liberation of the French capital, played the Marseillaise and then the announcer read a special appeal by Gen. Koenig to Parisians to watch the safety of food supplies until the provisional government alleviates hardships now existing.

Paris had been in the hands of the Germans since 7 a. m. June 14, 1940, when Nazi motorized columns moved into the city without a shot being fired.

The French capital has been outflanked by American forces driving for the German border following the capture of Sens, 50 miles southeast of Paris.

Victory Broadcast

(Reuters said that the first news of the liberation of Paris came in a broadcast from the radio transmitter controlled by the FFI, which appears to be situated either in Paris itself or very near the city.)

(A British broadcast recorded by the federal communications commission said that Gen. Charles De Gaulle, head of the provisional French government, has arrived in Rennes after visiting Coutances, Avranches and a number of other liberated French cities.

Official communique from supreme Allied headquarters during the last few days have shed little light on the fighting in the immediate vicinity of Paris, but today's announcement confirmed the capture of Sens, 58 miles southwest of the capital, indicating that American forces had swirled far beyond Paris.

American armored columns slashed across the Seine above and below Paris and it is reasonable to assume they were appraised of the situation within the capital.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 23—Prof. Albert Einstein, suffering no ill effects today from a "ducking" he received in Saranac lake yesterday afternoon. The famed mathematician and several companions were pulled from the cold lake waters after their 18-foot sailing boat had upset in the choppy waters.

another on the lives of the inhabitants of the once gay capital. Parisians were deported to work in Germany. Those who remained behind were short of food. Butter sold for as much as $22 a pound.

International News Service Staff Correspondent Pierre J. Huss yesterday reported that correspondents driving through newly liberated territory were able to approach as close as ten miles to the historic Parisian suburb of Versailles without encountering Germans.

The Allies' strategy, apparently, was to isolate Paris and then allow the French themselves to wrest it from the clutches of the hated Nazis. The strategy worked to perfection.

Fifty thousands members of the FFI, together with several thousand and unarmed civilians, participated in the liberation of Paris, according to Gen. Koenig's communiqué.

German Mums
(As late as 12:17 p. m. today German time (6:17 a. m. EDT) the Nazi DNB agency transmitted a dispatch to the controlled European press saying that the situation in Paris "has calmed down as the result of strict measures, but it cannot be said whether terrorist and irresponsible elements will not provoke unrest shortly.")

The cultural center of Europe for centuries, Paris and its famous Eiffel tower are familiar to thousands of American tourists who in peacetime annually visited the French capital.

To Paris American art students flocked year after year to sit at the feet of the masters.

Then, in June, 1940, the Germans marched in and Adolf Hitler stood under the Arc De Triomphe as Frenchmen wept openly in the streets.

With the dread hand of the Nazis on them, Parisians were no longer the gay, carefree people Americans knew so well. Occupation authorities and the Vichy collaborators tried in vain to wean them away from their sympathy to the Allied cause.

Now, once more, Paris is free again, the second great Allied capital to be liberated from the clutches of Hitler.

tion alone has taken thousands of prisoners. Today I visited the huge barbed-wire enclosure where the prisoners are kept. It was an unforgettable sight. There were acres of men in the enclosure, acres of tired, beaten men in dirty grey, the living ghosts of Death Valley.

A large part of the German Seventh still is in the hell of Death Valley. But soon the last of the enemy who have not been killed or surrendered, will be caught in the final crunch of the great Allied jaws that relentlessly are coming together.

Spills Everywhere

The spoils are overwhelming—mountains of ammunition, food, long lines of half-tracked troop carriers, trucks, tanks, command cars, horses, clothing, etc.

G.I.s are busy painting the big white star insignia of U. S. forces on top of the captured equipment, a symbolic end to a historic military job which this correspondent feels privileged to have witnessed.

A profitable trade in war souvenirs already has sprung up between British and American troops. Prime vendible articles are Luger and Walther pistols, German machine-pistols, machineguns and even horses.

My jeep driver, Henry McDermott, of Watertown, Mass., surprised me today by dumping a jeep-load of German helmets in my lap, including smart sponge-rubber German paratrooper helmets.

Paul Gallico, of Cosmopolitan magazine, shopping for a Luger pistol, just now talked to a British Tommy who told of capturing a brand new German Mark IV tank.

Gives Away Tank

Gallico jokingly asked: "How much will you take for it?" The driver replied: "You can have her for free."

Some heroic deeds of the troops who helped straighten up the pocket are now coming to light. Sgt. Rodney Cloutman of Athol, Mass., 26-year-old former shipping room clerk in a shoe factory, out-did the famed Sgt. York by bringing in 400 prisoners with the aid of a captured German sergeant who engaged in pantomime with Cloutman showing his good faith in the Americans and inducing the groups of shell-battered Germans to surrender.

Cloutman also claims 1,500 more Germans were discovered in an assembly area who may or may not have been previously captured—it is hard to tell in this scrambled situation.

Among other heroes of the pocket closure was a two-man bazooka team which knocked out four Mark IV tanks in 10 minutes.

Pfc. Giebelstein of Bennett, Iowa, one of the bazooka men, scored four bulls eye with five shots. He had only fired two practice shots previously in all his life.

Pfc. George J. Caldwell of Moreland, Ga., did the loading. Both men were under fire as they dashed out in the open to destroy the tanks.

Such breakthrough attempts were made many times into the Allied cordon, but have been unsuccessful the last few days. So the Germans had to stay and take a terrific bombardment of more than 1,000 artillery guns from both sides of the gap—while we poured on everything we had.

The Japs from the seas would result in calling officers from every quarter of the globe," said O'Mahoney.

"To my mind these officers are doing a greater service where they are. I have always regarded the demand for immediate trial as political.

"It seems to me that this is demonstrated by the statements now being made. Obviously these men are talking not from facts but from suspicion."

Brewster said the whole treatment of the situation, however, has been such as to make Kimmel and Short "the goats" without their ever having an opportunity to defend themselves, which is most un-American.

"I have never been satisfied with the argument that it would hinder the war if we have all the facts known," Brewster added. "I think congress has leaned over backward in not going into the matter."

Brewster added tartly that one could hardly expect a commission created by the executive (the Roberts commission) to convict the executive who created it.

Rep. Hoffman (R) Mich., yesterday charged that President Roosevelt was directly responsible for the Pearl Harbor disaster and both he and Rep. Short (R) Mo., said Admiral Kimmel and Gen. Short should be given an opportunity to tell their story.

from the War department, a permanent United States Army mechanized group was assembled at Ft. Eustis, Virginia. Col. Daniel Van Voorhis, a cavalry officer of outstanding record and performance was placed in command. Within that unit, which was organized nine years before the Nazi blitzkrieg of Poland, was to be found every single element that was contained in and used by the Panzer divisions at the outbreak of the second world war.

Even though it was on an experimental basis, the United States Army in 1930 led in the world its knowledge of mechanized and motorized weapons.

Aid For Patton

That permanent mechanized force which was born at Fort Eustis, Virginia is the parent of the armored divisions General Patton is now using with such crushing dash and decision over the terrain of sunny France. In the Spring of 1940, the German Panzer divisions were loose over all of France. Today those circumstances are reversed. Every person in the United States should give thanks for the expert knowledge which was possessed by that small group of highly trained regular officers who, with complete insistence, nursed into life and kept alive our mechanized and motorized service.

Major General Adna R. Chaffee, a gallant officer and a true cavalryman, at the declaration of the emergency created out first two armored divisions in the short space of time sixty days from one mechanized cavalry brigade of two regiments. Chaffee worked 24 hours a day to accomplish that amazing result. He exhausted his strength. He contracted pneumonia. He did so that what Patton is doing in France today might become a fact.

Cluttered cellars, attics, closets and stairs are breeding places for fires, and may cause falls to those entering the areas. With so much need for the salvage of paper, metal, rubber and other materials, a clean-up of home danger spots will yield needed materials, not missed by the owners but needed in winning the war.

With the second and third Ukrainian armies blasting ahead and taking heavy toll of Germans, other Russian units cleared Nazi forces from a 37-mile stretch of the Bug river's south bank north-east of Warsaw in a drive which threatened to flank the Polish capital from the north.

Other Red Army units drove the Soviet wedge between Warsaw and East Prussia even deeper by advancing 15 miles from the road center of Lomza.

In Latvia Russian fighters repelled German counter-attacks on their positions on the Baltic west of Riga, and in Estonia a Russian advance cut the Valga-Tartu rail line.

Japs Hard Hit

Smashing American bomber raids against Davao, in the Philippines, and Halmahera, Jap Moluccas islands stronghold were revealed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

While Liberator and Mitchell bombers continued the attacks on Halmahera by blasting airdrome installations with a record weight of bombs for the second straight day, patrol bombers returned to the pounding of Davao, principal port on Mindanao, southernmost of the Philippines.

The smash at Halmahera saw 135 tons of explosives rained on Kaese airdrome and positions at Wasile and Kaje bays. Eight parked Jap planes were destroyed or damaged, and much damage was observed in supply areas which had shuddered under a 110 ton raid the day before. There was no enemy interception.

No results were given from the attacks on Davao, but near misses were scored on an 8,000 ton Jap freighter south of the port.

American attack bombers scouring the ocean for Jap shipping near the Dutch East Indies island of Ceram destroyed two small coastal vessels and two barges.

Medium bombers searching the Flores sea bagged two more coasters and two barges.

Patrol bombers sank a small freighter northwest of Halmahera.

emies as overwhelming and as effective as we can make it."

In a defense of the program, which has been attacked in congress on several occasions, the report asserted: "Everything that has been done under the lend-lease act has been done for the defense of the United States and for no other purpose. . . we gave lend-lease in order to aid ourselves."

The report disclosed that more than half of the entire dollar volume of lend-lease is accounted for in the shipment of munitions to Allied nations actually fighting the war against the Axis. Nearly one-fourth of the total expenditure has been for industrial materials and products, while the balance is made up of agricultural products, ship repairs and rentals, ferrying of aircraft to the fighting fronts, and miscellaneous services.

Plays Victory Role

Lend-lease was credited with playing an important part in the developing offensives in Western Europe, Russia, and in the Far East.

"The combined forces of the United Nations are well on the way to Berlin and Tokyo," the report stated. "They are much further along the road than they could possibly have been without lend-lease and mutual aid."

The report laid particular emphasis on the aid given Russia in her drive against Germany from the east.

"The forces of the Soviet union, strengthened by lend-lease supplies have pushed the Nazis back 1,200 miles from the Caucasus to the gates of Warsaw," the report said. "The Red Army is over half of the way to Berlin."

More than 300,000 trucks and other military motor vehicles have been sent to the Soviet Union, it was stated, along with 11,000 planes, an undisclosed number of tanks and guns, and 339 locomotives.

The dollar value of all lend-lease aid to Russia was placed at six billion dollars.

Aid to the United Kingdom was placed at nine billion, 300 million dollars, including guns, shells and bombs alone amounting to one and a half billions.

WARNING GIVEN AGAINST FISH IN SCIOTO RIVER

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Pickaway county health commissioner, Wednesday urged residents of the county against the danger of eating dead or nearly dead fish taken from the Scioto river.

His warning followed one from the state health department, calling attention to the practice of seining fish killed by stream pollution.

In a letter to Dr. Blackburn, J. E. Bauman, acting director of health states:

"The Division of Conservation has called to our attention the occurrence of a fish killing of considerable magnitude, extending throughout the entire stretch of Scioto river from Columbus to Portsmouth. The recent rains after prolonged drouth have flushed out the stagnant streams tributary to the river, as well as having flushed out pools within Scioto river itself. Many fish have been reported suffocated by lack of oxygen in the stagnant water. According to the reports coming to the Conservation division, many people are gathering up the dead fish, intending to utilize them for eating purposes.

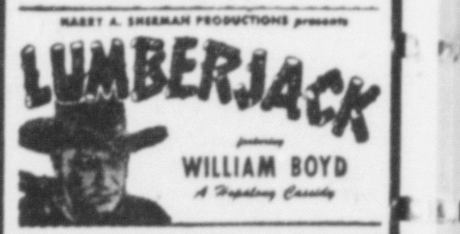

"This department wishes to call your attention to the great danger of such a practice of trying to utilize for food purposes any of these fish killed by suffocation. As the local health commissioner in your district will you please acquaint the public with the dangers of any attempt toward utilizing these dead fish. Any establishment or person found to be dispensing these fish for food purposes should be told immediately to dispose of the fish by burial or other means of destruction. Unless prompt steps are taken to prevent the use of these dead fish, a serious outbreak of food poisoning might occur."

Once Queen Victoria traveled on a train at a speed of 100 miles an hour. The speed was kept a secret from the public, however, so that it would not cause alarm.

WORLD GOVERNMENT

It is a good thing that some argument has arisen lately regarding the rights of the great world powers and the relative position of the small powers. It should be freely discussed, at a time when world power seems in a state of flux, with danger of four great powers, or any of them, riding high, wide and handsome.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate, wants moderation. He says: "The fact that we four leading nations have developed overwhelming power as against our enemies does not give us the right to organize the world so that we four will always be free to do what we please, while the rest of the world is to be made subject to our coercion. That would be the rankest form of imperialism. Such a proposal would be rejected by the American people."

He is doubtless right on this point, and the State Department at Washington has been prompt in stating that the present administration has no such purpose of lordship over the rest of the world.

This, however, cannot be the end of the matter. It remains to be seen just how the powerful nations are going to associate themselves with the lesser nations so as to insure for them the same freedom which our American system provides for its small states as against its large ones. Can the plan for a united and cooperative world be worked out along this line?

CORRECTIVE OCCUPATION

NATIONS learn the hard way, and particularly Uncle Sam. But they do learn. And one of the most convincing evidences in this country just now is the statement by the President that whenever or however Germany and Japan surrender, those lawless countries will be occupied by Allied forces.

It was largely the lack of such stern action last time, and the almost frivolous way in which we abandoned the job of disciplining international criminals, that led eventually to the recent Nazi horrors and the threatened breakdown of European civilization.

From now on, it may be hoped that American conduct of international affairs will be more stout and realistic, directed neither by love nor hate, but by a decent regard for our own rights and the requirements of modern life. Two great wars have shown that our civilization cannot survive without direct and continuous association of the United States with foreign nations, and helpful participation in foreign affairs. The world grows steadily smaller, and our own nation steadily larger in power and duties. We cannot avoid the duties any more than we can avoid the power.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

CONGRESSMEN IRKED

WASHINGTON—Congressmen who have heard the inside story of General Benny Giles kow-towing to the British in Egypt are all burnt up, some talk of probing the whole Near Eastern picture.

One thing which especially burns them up is General Giles' instruction to Americans in Cairo last month that there should be no celebration of the 4th of July. The General sent out word that celebration of American independence from Great Britain might offend our British allies and there should be no dinners or parties among those under his command.

As a result, Cairo was so quiet on July 4 that one Britisher approached an American friend next day and said: "Very inhospitable of you fellows, not to invite us to any of your 4th of July parties. We've always been invited before."

NOTE—Many Britishers do not agree with Churchill's Empire policy of throttling the Greek liberation movement; also have no great respect for General Giles' subservient attitude toward Churchill policy.

WASHINGTON COLD AIR

An engineer at the Navy Department building got a call the other day to come to a room on the second floor, raise the temperature in an overchilled, air-conditioned suite. Arriving at the room, the engineer was surprised to learn the man who had complained was Polar explorer Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

NOTE—Washington doctors say their Summer business has never been better since air-conditioning hit the capital. Donald Nelson recently got mid-Summer pneumonia. Lt. Earle Mayfield, son of Texas' ex-Senator, came to Washington's air-cooled hotels from Houston, was taken to the hospital on a pneumonia stretcher.

OVERTON'S ISOLATIONIST RECORD

Most significant election development of the year has been the increasing casualty list of isolationist or obstructionist members of Congress, including Bennett Clark of Missouri, Worth Clark of Idaho, "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina, Lambertson of Kansas, Starnes of Alabama, and Dies of Texas.

Now it looks as if the trend were continuing in Louisiana, where Senator John Overton faces the fight of his life. Last time Overton ran for renomination, in 1938, he was unopposed; had only 250 votes cast against him in the final election. This time, however, he faces two hard-hitting opponents.

Difference is that, between 1938 and today, Overton made the mistake of leading a vigorous crusade against Roosevelt's attempt to revise the Neutrality Act in order to send arms to England. Overton led this fight even after war had started in 1939. Again, in 1940 he told Senate colleagues:

"I am not one of those who expect that Hitler will be over here tomorrow or possibly next year."

While this happened before Pearl Harbor, the people of Louisiana have long memories. Also, Overton has been shown up on occasion by opposing important war legislation in the secrecy of the Appropriations Committee, of which he is a member, until he got certain patronage out of the White House. Thus, he covertly opposed the lend-lease bill until the little

DIET AND HEALTH

Home Medication for Child

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IN THESE days of doctor shortage every mother, father, or housekeeper should have some idea of the sensible thing to do in convulsions in childhood is intestinal putrefaction, so an enema is indicated.

Croup

Croup, an old fashioned name, may be retained to designate a combination of hoarseness, barking or rasping cough, spasm of the vocal cords so that the breath comes and goes with difficulty, with long drawn crowing or wheezing sounds. Because the child usually awakens at night with this set of symptoms it makes the situation all the more alarming. The fear of the parents is always that croup is caused by diphtheria, but diphtheria is not as frequent as it used to be, and if the child has had its immunization with diphtheria toxoid it can be eliminated.

The commonest cause of croup is a bronchitis with laryngitis and thick, ropy mucus clinging to the vocal cords. The spasm of the muscles of the larynx is the thing to overcome and this can best be done by inducing vomiting. A teaspoonful of syrup of ipecac will do this, or if this is not at hand, give a teaspoonful of melted butter, lard or olive oil every few minutes. Besides this, put a cold compress, made by wringing a wash cloth out of cold water, over the region of the larynx and hot water inhalation, which can be arranged by allowing steam from the spout of a teakettle to be breathed in. A medicament is not necessary with this steam, but if one is used, tincture of benzoin thrown on the water in the kettle is the best.

Nose Bleed

Nose bleed—if a nose bleed has lasted more than 10 minutes in spite of such simple treatment as rest, compression of the nose and cold applications to the face, a tampon consisting of gauze or cotton should be inserted deep in the nose. If you get a doctor he will probably saturate the tampon with adrenalin, but this is too dangerous a drug for household medicine.

THE REST OF MY LIFE WITH YOU

by Faith Baldwin

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

"You married Irene without telling me beforehand. I refused to let myself be hurt... if that was what you wanted, well and good. I grew fond of her. I applauded her efforts to follow in my footsteps. When she died, I was stricken, chiefly for your sake."

Matthew said, "You look at me as if it was my fault."

"I haven't even thought it. Then, when Judith returned... I was glad, I thought she was right for you. I still do."

After a pause, Matthew frowned. "I suppose I'm to be tickled to death about you and Lynn?"

"No," said his mother. "I don't expect anything of the kind."

Suddenly he exclaimed, "I've been a fool!"

Mary held her breath. Presently he went on, "Judith wanted a child. I didn't. I didn't want to share her... I thought, 'We could wait. If she had had a baby this wouldn't have happened.'"

His mother said steadily, "Don't be too sure of that. What Judith wanted was that your need for a child would be as deep and compelling as her own, a living symbol of your love for each other."

"I thought we were sufficient to each other."

"You weren't," his mother said, after a moment.

The doorbell rang. She said, "That's Lynn. He's coming for dinner." She looked at her son. "I'm not going to ask you to be civil to him," she said firmly. "I'm going to tell you to be civil."

Lynn came in, and looked from one to the other. He said, "I see that you told him. He crossed over to the young doctor and held out his hand. 'And I see that you don't like the idea, Matthew. But perhaps you'll get used to it. I hope so, very sincerely.'"

Matthew took the older man's hand, saying, "It's all right with me, Lynn. I was a little startled, at first. He tried to smile; succeeded. He added, 'I hope you'll be very happy.'"

"Good!" exclaimed Lynn heartily. "We expect to be. If your mother isn't, I shall beat her on alternate Tuesdays." He looked younger than Matthew had ever seen him, more confident, gay. He saw his mother look from him to Lynn, saw her face light up, her eyes shine.

He crossed over and kissed his mother on the cheek. He said, "Okay—and I'll give you away," and patted her on the shoulder. Tears stood in her eyes. She thought, "It's hard for him, but he's trying."

Lynn asked, "Aren't you staying to dinner?"

Matthew shook his head. "I have to make a call," he said. "So long, you two."

Driving out to Westchester in the thick darkness, heavy with wet snow, he thought, "Well, that's that. He had lost them both, his mother and his wife."

Matthew celebrated Christmas by dining alone at his club. Little Place was closed, and he refused a dozen invitations. His mother and her husband were in Bermuda. She had said, "Lynn... about Christmas... I can't bear to leave Matthew alone," and Lynn had answered, "Then you mustn't, of course. But dare I exercise a husband's prerogative—that of advice only—and suggest that it might be good discipline?"

They had been married very quietly, with only Matthew and Lynn's daughter and her husband present.

Judith had wired: "You know how happy I am for you and how much I want to be with you." On the night before the wedding she had talked to Mary by telephone. Mary had asked, "Have you heard from Matthew?" and there was a silence; then Judith answered, "No."

So on Christmas night, Matthew dined at his club alone. He thought, "She can't let Christmas go by like this, she'll write, she'll wire, she'll phone... But there was nothing."

He reached home late that night. Olga and Nils had done their best with holly and a small trimmed tree. They had, that morning, displayed their gifts from Judith and Matthew had admired them. His own gifts were under the tree, those from his mother and Lynn, from his associates, from patients.

Twice during the evening he went to the telephone and asked for long distance, only to tell the operator that he had changed his mind.

When, shortly before midnight, the phone rang sharply, he moved to answer it with his heart hammering.

But it was the hospital calling, and he put on his coat and went out.

The New Year came, and still no word from Judith. Matthew told himself: Well, she's made up her mind. I'll have to make up mine.

But his was already made up. She did not love him or she would not have left him... Yet, although his mind said that, that's it, she doesn't love me, he knew how wrong a man's mind can be. Matthew's heart spoke too strongly, drowning the voice of his mind.

Matthew went out whenever he could. He put the best face possible on the situation, so far as outsiders were concerned, saying: "Judith was well, but her mother was ill and she felt that she must be with her." That was the invariable answer to any question, asked out of friendship, concern, or curiosity. No more, no less.

Sam and Bill looked at him and listened patiently to their wives' inevitable discussions. To each other the men said, "It looks bad... but—"

Elizabeth told her husband definitely, "I know she's left him," and her eyes were wet. Peter kissed her and said soothingly, "You know nothing of the kind, dear."

Matthew wondered (since he himself had said, "If you leave me you needn't come back!") why he could not face it, even to admit it to his friends? Why not say bluntly: Sure she's left me. No, she's not coming back... But his pride would not permit it.

He thought: If I don't hear from her within the next two weeks, I'll write and ask: Do you wish me to see a lawyer?

Judith had said nothing about divorce. Yet what else could it mean, the delay and silence?

Early in January, Matthew met an attractive young divorcee, a Mrs. Mason, who was a clever, sleek, career woman. He encountered her first at the home of a patient, when he dropped in one late afternoon, and later found himself taking her home. She lived on Sutton Place, alone. She asked, driving there with him, "You're married, aren't you?"

"Yes," said Matthew, "does that make any difference?"

She laughed. "It might," she said. "It seems to me that I've met your wife somewhere. Why wasn't she with you today?"

"She's in California," he told her, "with her mother who is ill."

"I see," said Mrs. Mason who had heard all about Judith, ten minutes after meeting Matthew, after she had succeeded in detaching herself long enough to make a few inquiries of her hostess.

Now and then they went to the theater or dined together. Gwen Mason was very attractive. She liked him.

Toward the end of January, Gwen came to dine with Matthew at the apartment. Nils served, disapprovingly, and Olga shed tears in the kitchen. They had been given the evening off, after dinner. Olga said, "I knew she wasn't coming back."

They looked at each other in horror. Gwen had red hair and dark eyes and she wore black alluringly.

"I hope," said Matthew smiling, "that I'm not called out tonight."

"I hope so too," said Gwen.

Funny how little they had to say to each other. The silence was not that of lovers or potential lovers, but of awkward acquaintances.

Some time after dinner, Gwen murmured, "Perhaps I made a mistake... or did you?" And when Matthew asked, "What do you mean?" she shook her red head and regarded Judith's picture on the mantel.

"If I were a man," she commented, "and had a wife who looked like that I wouldn't let her stay away."

The telephone rang. It was a patient. It was rescue, it was respite.

"My dear," apologized Matthew, "I'm so terribly sorry."

"Nonsense," said Gwen, "you're relieved." She rose and went to get her wraps. She said, standing there, "I'll take a taxi. No, don't bother. It was fun while it lasted and it might have been more fun."

She gave him her cool, firm hand. "Good night, Matthew," she said, "thanks for everything. Tonight was by way of an experiment, wasn't it? You see, you can't forget that you're still in love with your wife."

The door closed and Matthew took out his handkerchief and mopped his forehead. He took a deep breath.

RESULTS obtained on some hands would be impossible except through harmonious co-operation of all four players at the table. There may be sign-posts with glaring bulletins telling the defenders just what to do to beat the declarer, but they sometimes find ways to ignore them all and, occasionally, go directly counter to the clearly marked guides. A declarer who takes advantage of such wild driving can cash in plenty.

West North East South
1NT 2♥ 2NT 3♣

Much of the bidding you actually find at the rubber bridge table is about like that tabulated—something no bridge book would ever recommend. There sits North sticking his vulnerable neck out over an opening No Trump. Then East, able to make a free bid after that overcall, refrains from doubling it, though he knows his partner has a substantial hand.

On top of that, South pokes his hand into the fire of No Trump bidders at his right and left, and escapes without a double, let alone a No Trump game bid by his opponents.

But the play? Oh, yes, the play. West took the heart A and switched to his spade J. The K won and the heart Q was led. East held up his K, so a diamond was thrown by South. For some weird reason, he held up again when the heart 10 came along, and a second diamond was chucked. Then the club 10 was finessed to the A, the diamond A won and the Q fired back. That was ruffed, three clubs were run, the spade A was an entry for the heart 9 to discard the spade 7, and the last trick was a club, producing an extra trick.

West would have reckoned East was not well fixed in spades, or he would have bid them over North's 2-Hearts instead of No Trump. He could not have clubs, since South bid them and East did not double. He must have had diamond strength of some kind. So West, after his heart A, should have switched to a diamond, preferably the A. Had he done so, the pair would have taken three tricks in diamonds, one in hearts and one in clubs, setting the contract, possibly also one in spades, depending on what developed along the way.

Procopis to Live in Sweden | Halifax Press Conferences
Until European War Is Over | Informal, Most Interesting

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Madame Procopie, wife of the Finnish minister whom the United States state department asked to leave Washington about two months ago because his country was an ally of Germany, is not in the least dismayed by her lonely and somewhat difficult situation here.

At luncheon the other day she looked happy and healthy. She said the newest Procopie child who will be christened Carl Frederick when he and his brother, sister, and mother shall have joined his father abroad, is an "adorable, cuddly baby."

Carl Frederick Procopie Baby. He is now six weeks old and, of course, does not know of the great talk here, there and everywhere that his coming caused when his mother was deciding whether or not to accompany his father into Finland a fortnight or so before Carl Frederick made his first appearance in this internationally confused world.

Madame Procopie and the three babies—the oldest is not more than four—will take the first ship out for Sweden. The English wife of the former Finnish minister to the United States says that she and the children would be on their way across the ocean right now were it not for the fact that the ship on which they must sail is momentarily tied up in a Swedish port.

Sweden is only about two hours by plane from Finland. Since it has steadfastly remained neutral Hjalmar Procopie may easily visit his family there. Madame Procopie will not go to England where her family is living in comparative security but will remain in Sweden until the war is over.

UNDoubtedly THE ENGLISH are beguiling Old Smoothies. Certainly Viscount Halifax, his Britannic majesty's ambassador to the United States knows how to be charmingly informal at a news conference. And when a great man is charmingly informal at a news conference, it's time for somebody to strike out in behalf of poor old "Pro Bono Publico." You remember that half-forgotten little guy. He used to write letters about the terrible condition of the street lamps way back in the days before the war.

At the British embassy when the ambassador called a news conference to introduce Sir Alexander Cadogan, Britain's permanent undersecretary for foreign affairs, and to report on his own trip to England, I arrived in the marble and black mirrored embassy drawing room a little behind schedule. There sat the British ambassador in white shirt sleeves and long cigaret holder (with other suitable garments, of course).

He was as nonchalant as is Mr. Roosevelt, when the president reports on his own foreign goings on.

Only Lord Halifax had out-Roosevelted Mr. Roosevelt. He had urged the gentlemen of the press and radio to take off their coats, and there the coats hung, wilting, in the August humidity on the back of little gold drawing room chairs.

"Here is a situation to be watched," I thought quickly. "When the British ambassador and the press take off their coats and literally roll up their sleeves together, something is going to happen."

Nothing in particular seemed to happen except reassurances of peace and good will. You'd never have been able to tell from Lord Halifax's manner or that of Sir Alexander Cadogan (pronounced Kay-due-gin) that either gentleman had ever heard of the Lend-Lease agitation. It was Paul Wooten who asked the 64-dollar question.

"Mr. Ambassador, is it true that Britain wishes an extension of the Lend-Lease?"

There was a breathless pause in the general atmosphere. But a pause of a fraction of a fraction of a second: "I rather believe," said Lord Halifax, "I rather fancy that some people are thinking faster on the subject of Lend-Lease than we ourselves are thinking."

Several more 64-dollar questions on the same ticklish theme were asked. But the ambassador lost not a single dash of composure. He even tossed off a little joke here and there in the best White House manner.

It was evident, certainly to an American with a nationalistic turn of mind, that the British, having heard the rough reiterations of their recent trial shot, hinting that we must supply them further with Lend-Lease, have decided to pipe down, as one would say in Scotland, under the mood of the United States has become more receptive.

Two simple steps to amazing New STRENGTH

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome the discomforts or embarrassment of sour stomach, jerky nerves, loss of appetite, underweight, digestive complaints, weakness, poor complexion!

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped. So with ample stomach digestive juices PLUS RICH, RED-BLOOD you should enjoy that sense of well-being which denotes physical fitness... mental alertness!

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need as it is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient.

Have a Coca-Cola=Let's work refreshed

... or a helping hand on the farm

Helping to feed America means long hours in the fields... endless tasks to perform. All the more welcome, then, is the friendly pause for an ice-cold Coca-Cola. Have a "Coke", says a farm companion, and it means Let's work refreshed. In country home or city dwelling, frosty bottles of "Coke" belong in the icebox. Across America, Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes,—a symbol of kindly hospitality.

The Ashville schools will open Tuesday, September 5 at 9 a. m., using the time prevalent at that date.

At a meeting of the Ashville board of education Monday, the policy of employing a local attendance officer was discussed, but definite action was postponed until a special meeting to be held Saturday.

Russell Hoover and his helpers, Richard Hoover and James McNeal, are making satisfactory progress in roofing the Ashville school building, and expect to complete the work this week.

Just north of Circleville Saturday, the writer observed some field corn in the shock. This must be one of the earliest dates in recent years for corn cutting.

The shortage of ice at Celina and St. Marys prevented Ashville residents from obtaining an abundant supply of fresh fish this week. At least that is the alibi being used by Claude Kraft for failing to remember his friends with samples of his fishing prowess, after his return from a recent fishing trip.

Dr. G. E. Swoyer, pastor of the First Lutheran church at Mansfield, is visiting with his sisters, Mrs. W. A. Bowers and Mrs. E. F. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Abernathy and daughter, Julia Belle, of St. Louis, Missouri, are visiting Mrs. Abernathy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Schlegel.

FIGHT FEATURES

BROWNS' DEFEAT

Loss Fails To Cut Leaders Margin As Red Sox Bow To Athletics

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—There may be, and probably will be a few fines and a suspension or two handed out today following a gorgeous free-for-all donnybrook in Washington last night where old Johnny Niggeling of the Senators shut out the Browns with six hits, 3-0.

The battle started when Nelson Potter, Browns' pitcher, is alleged to have made some slighting remark in spades to Outfielder George Case of the Senators. Case retaliated with a right hook and the battle was on. Eddie Butka, Washington utility infielder came roaring out of the dug-out and started slugging his way through a bunch of Brownsies, who, of course, also did a little slugging on their own account while the cops and umpires strove in vain for peace.

Finally, peace was restored, the combatants patched up, and the Senators added to Potter's woes by taking the ball game.

Of course, it could have been the heat that started all this but more likely it was the strain the Browns are beginning to feel as they struggle to win their first American League pennant.

The Browns entered the game knowing that the Indians had topped the Red Sox, 5-3 and that the Yanks had taken the Tigers, 9-7. They undoubtedly looked forward to a rather easy decision over the Senators and an increased lead over their closest rivals.

But Johnny Niggeling, who is crowding 40, was too much for them, and as inning after inning went by without a Brownie run, the boys' nerves probably became a little unstrung and, if there was any bench jockeying going on, it was a simple matter to start a scrap.

The Yanks finally got rid of their old nemesis, Hal Newhouse, who had beaten them five times this year. The Yanks had a nine run lead going into the seventh but the Tigers suddenly went on a rampage, derricking Mel Queen, and had the tying run on base when the game ended.

Young Russ Christopher, who has become Connie Mack's ace, turned in his seventh straight victory as the Athletics downed the White Sox, 5-1.

In the other circuit, the Dodgers blew a late lead to lose to the Pirates, 7-5. It was the Pirates' 17th victory in 18 games.

The Phils beat the Reds, 4-3, behind Bill Lee and then lost to Tomas De La Cruz, 5-1. The Cubs handed the Giants one on a platter, 9-8, by making five atrocious errors, and the Cards took a pair from the Braves, 7-4 and 2-1.

Homers by Marion Martin and Stan Musial settled the first game and Max Lanier held the Braves to one hit in the second game while Stan Musial's single in the fifth drove George Fallon home for the winning run.

The game-winning uprising came in the fifth inning after two were out. Graef and Stout singled, then Lanman walked to fill the bases. Clifton smashed a single to left to score Graef and Stout. Jay Reynolds laid down a bunt which scored Lanman. John Reynolds singled to plate Clifton but Jay Reynolds was out at home trying to score on the same hit.

Blue Ribbon took a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Seymour doubled, took third on Sims' sacrifice and scored on Hennis' outfield fly. The Dairy team got its other run in the seventh when Stonerok, who singled, scored on George's base hit.

Young Pheasants Thrive On Work At Brehmer Greenhouse

FLORIST USES WILD BIRDS TO CONTROL BUGS

Weeds Also Kept Out Of Flower Beds By Hard Working "Guests"

An interesting experiment in the use of pheasants to control insects in a greenhouse has proved successful in Cincinnati, according to C. E. Webb, of the state conservation division.

Robert Brehmer, operator of the Brehmer greenhouses, obtained young pheasants from the conservation department and reports they have done a good job of keeping insects and weeds out of beds of chrysanthemums, roses and asters in what is known as a cloth house.

The pheasants will be liberated in Pickaway county after they have completed their tasks at the greenhouse.

Housed In Pens
Mr. Brehmer built a regulation pen which was installed in the cloth house and in which the birds were kept inclosed for a few days. Later the birds were allowed to roam all over the cloth house. The young pheasants were not fed the usual mash and grain during the forenoon in order that they might prey on the bugs and worms present in the cloth house. After they had had an opportunity to eat all the bugs and worms they wanted they were fed the mash and grain ration. Sour milk was given the birds once a week to prevent droopiness. The experiment has proven fully successful.

The results as tabulated from the observations of Mr. Brehmer and his associates:

There has been a 100% survival of the birds and all are in a healthy condition.

There are many species of climbing cut worms which live in the soil and work on the plants during the early morning and go back into the soil when the weather becomes warm and hot thus making these worms difficult for the florist to control.

Death to Bugs

Mr. Brehmer observed that the young pheasants controlled three species of these climbing cut worms and perhaps some other species of cut worms.

In the soil which was brought into the cloth house for the planting beds were grasshopper eggs which hatched out later. Many young grasshoppers were seen in the inclosure when the pheasants were admitted, but later practically no grasshoppers were found.

Leaf rollers cause considerable trouble to the florist since they roll a leaf around themselves and cannot be controlled by spraying. The birds ate the worms in the leaf rolls and the moths which lay the eggs which produce the leafrollers.

The pheasants destroyed measuring worms and cabbage worms which are damaging to the plants cultivated in the cloth house.

Leaf hoppers were present in the cloth house when the pheasants were admitted. These were promptly destroyed.

The chrysanthemums were covered by a dark cloth from 5 p. m. to 7 a. m. Under the folds of this dark cloth on the ground sow bugs accumulated. When this cloth was pulled back at the corners in the morning the pheasants learned that the sow bugs would accumulate at the corners where the folds of the dark cloth still furnished a dark place for them. The birds followed to the corners to eat the bugs. The sow bugs do not damage the plants but they do carry plant diseases from one plant to another.

The young pheasants did no damage to the plants under cultivation but they did clean up all the tender weeds as they started growth thus saving Mr. Brehmer the labor which would otherwise have been necessary for weed control.

"I WAS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING!"

Newspaper Editor, Who Was Struck by Bolt and Lived, Here Tells for First Time His Harrowing Experience

EDITOR'S NOTE—Roy E. Dickey, city editor of the Van Wert, O., Times-Bulletin, who was struck by lightning a few weeks ago and miraculously lived, tells of his experience below.

By ROY E. DICKEY
Written for Central Press

VAN WERT, O.—I was one of 2,000 persons, out of some 130 million in the United States, expected to be killed or injured by lightning this summer, most of them during July and August.

Dead persons do not talk, so you know that, miraculously, I am one of those able to tell about my experience. I do not know how lucky I was because I have been unable to learn what percentage of those persons struck are killed.

But out of the number of cases I have been told about, locally, it appears that far more persons live than are killed, and a far greater number only given a minor shock than receive serious injuries.

I have also learned through my own research, interviews with others struck and living, that your chances of recovering from the after effects are greater if you are young than if you are up in years. I know a man over 60, who, after six years, still has the same aches, pains and other physical sensations that I do after only a few weeks from the time I was struck.

Just what are the nature of these after effects and what treatment might be helpful the medical profession does not seem to know. They say too few persons have been struck by lightning and lived for doctors to find out, and offer only time as a possible healer. They guess that the tissue, nerve sheaths and possibly even the bone marrow are injured.

How It Feels Afterwards

The physical after effects, for those who received even possibly a larger charge of electricity than myself, seem to be aches and pains in muscles, ligaments and bones, particularly in the legs and feet, worse at times than others, which make walking and standing painful; burning and tingling of the soles and sides of the feet, in my case at times feeling like frost bite; and a lack of energy, or general physical exhaustion.

In any event, if you are going to be struck, you will be only one-hundredth of a second from being dead or still alive, for scientists say that is the length of time it takes a bolt to pass from cloud to earth. So, unless you are one of those persons who are scared before they know they are going to be hurt, you need not be afraid of electrical storms. It is only when you do not see the lightning nor hear the thunder that you have been struck very badly.

I am no more afraid of electrical storms today than I was as I stood there in a metal-roofed barn, unprotected by lightning rods, on an Ohio farm, fascinated by those white hot, jagged fingers reaching down from the sky, first in one direction and then in another.

The next I knew I was regaining consciousness on the dirt floor where I had fallen on my stomach and the right side of my head. My first thought was that I wanted to die. I do not know why. I was not in pain.

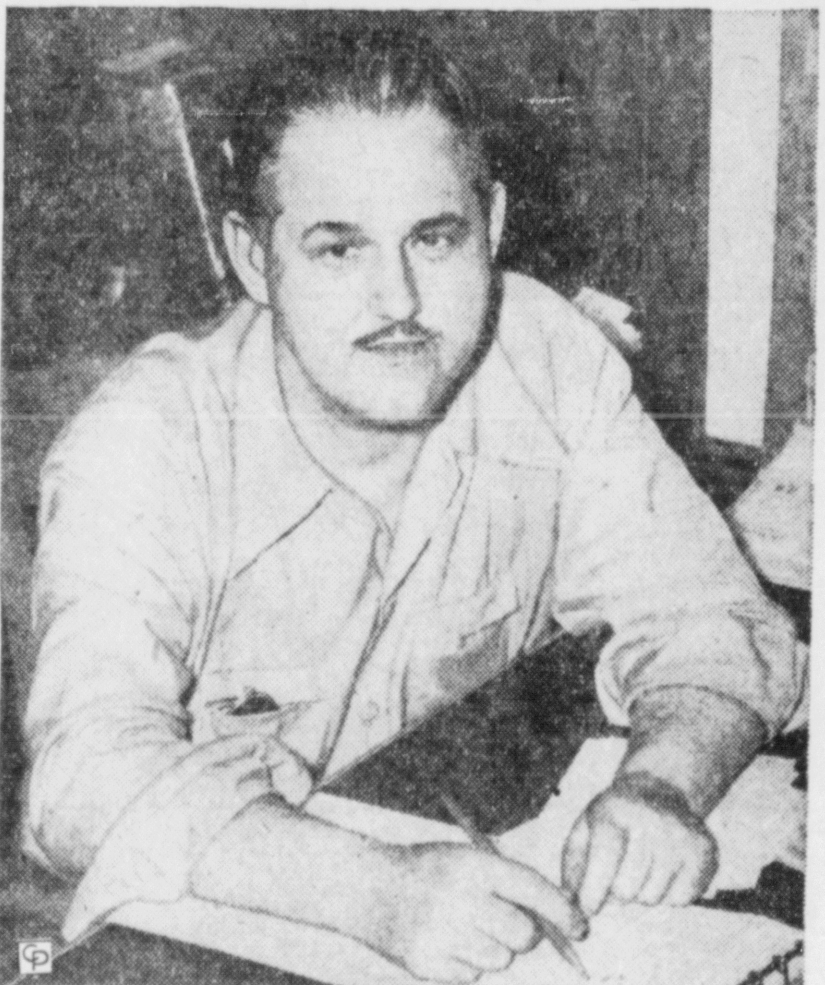

I not only did not know what had happened to me, but did not wonder. I did not even think of where I was. But it was immediately replaced by a tremendous desire to live. I was not yet conscious there was a storm going on and that I might have been struck by lightning. I did not know that until later when I asked.

The thoughts came so fast then that I can scarcely remember which was first, but they all had to do with what I thought might keep me from slipping into the valley of death.

I tried to call my brother-in-law, who was milking nearby, but no word came. I had no more use of my voice than I had of my limbs.

It may have just as well been my head lying there, the brain alive, but I assured myself I must have a body even though I could not feel it nor look and see it.

At one time after regaining consciousness I felt it an effort to remain conscious. But I was afraid to lapse off into unconsciousness matter of a U. S. marshall in Louisiana was adjusted. After that he voted for lend-lease.

All of which is now coming back to haunt him.

CHURCHILL AND MARLBOROUGH

Close friends of Winston Churchill reveal that the key to his most important moves is his ancestor, the Duke of Marlborough, founder of the Churchill dynasty. The men Churchill chooses for important posts, his politics of empire—all are influenced by studying the life of Marlborough.

Lord Halifax, for instance, will never have to leave his post as British ambassador to Washington as long as Churchill is prime minister, for Halifax's ancestor once saved the Duke of Marlborough from jail.

Likewise, Churchill's friendship for Sir Alexander Cadogan and the latter's appointment as British peace-machinery negotiator date back to the fact that Cadogan's ancestor was chief of staff to the Duke of Marlborough when Marlborough invaded Ireland in 1690.

Sir Alexander is now chief British delegate to the Dumbarton Oaks conference to lay the cornerstone for future world peace.

Churchill best tells the story himself in his book on Marlborough.

"William Cadogan (later Earl of Cadogan), a Dublin lawyer, had won Marlborough's confidence at the taking of Cork and Kinsale," Churchill wrote. "Throughout the ten campaigns, he was not only quartermaster general, but what we should call chief of staff and director of intelligence. It was Marlborough's practice to send with the reconnoitering cavalry and officer of high rank who knew the commander-in-chief's mind and his plans and could observe the enemy through his eyes. Cadogan repeatedly played this part."

"He shared Marlborough's fall, refusing to separate himself 'from the great man to whom I am under such infinite obligations, I would be a monster if I did otherwise."

TIES WITH HALIFAX

Churchill's ties to Lord Halifax, ambassador in Washington, are even deeper.

Halifax's ancestor, according to Churchill's own account in his book, "conducted a rudimentary form of life insurance. At 24, Marlborough purchased from Lord Halifax for 4,500 pounds (given him by the Duchess of Cleveland) an annuity of 500 pounds for life. It was a profitable investment. The enjoyed its fruits for nearly 50 years. It was the foundation of his immense fortune."

However, the earlier Lord Halifax performed an even greater service for Marlborough, which Winston Churchill has not forgotten. Marlborough was suspected of treason for communicating with the exiled King James and was thrown into the London Tower by King William of Orange. Churchill tells in his book how, after Marlborough had been in prison six weeks, Lord Halifax "did not fail him" and secured his release after putting up bail of 6,000 pounds.

Today, Churchill will never fail the present Lord Halifax.

Note—The Duke of Marlborough, who fought the Battle of Blenheim against the French, is considered one of England's greatest soldiers. Somewhat like Winston Churchill, he is described as having "held together for years an army drawn from every nation in Christendom."

JUST LIKE GOLFING IN SOME RESPECTS!

Did you ever notice how carefully an expert golfer selects the right club for each shot? Well, providing insurance is something like that. An agent has to select the right policy depending upon the protection he's aiming at. He can't simply use "snap judgment." It must be based upon experience and knowledge.

Next time you have a protection problem, why not let us select the right protection for you?
